1	Sort of - I expected more focus on the particular elements of the portfolio, what materials should be included.	The collaborative activities, amount of focus on classroom methods.	When the activities were addressed in the powerpoint presentation, how the ideas can be applied to our class	 A. Good for articulating thoughts, defining ideas. B. Didn't see the word template. C. I could hardly see what was written on the powerpoint presentation. D. An outline of what elements to include in the portfolio, and a description of each (more examples) 	Very- not necessarily for creating a portfolio, but for ideas for projects, assignments, learning from people in other departments.	Yes- I got some ideas for how to make classes more interactive, some good project ideas.	1
	Exceeded my expectations. Reading the portfolio handout I expected lectures.	The interactive exercises - were great fun as well as instructive.	When the different groups presented their courses - the categories of templates were thought provoking and useful	work" would have been useful to discuss the question. B. Yes C. Too long D. Participants list wit department affiliations.	Too short, but our little group was engaging.	Since I teach small seminars I like the introduction method.	2
3	100% Interaction, information rendered	Group dynamic	Having done awareness training before, from the beginning	A. Yes, to revisit our own teaching methods. B. Yes	Very skillfully presented, extremely useful.	Yes, measuring the comprehension climate of the classroom.	3
4	Yes - very informative	Liked the group activities and Paul King's presentation. No it was not different from what I anticipated.	Made sense already - to some degree I feel it was like "preaching to the choir" but I did enjoy it immensely. I liked interacting with the other faculty an the exercises on the "class development" activity	A. Yes B. Did not see it yet C. No, could not see it well. D. Not sure	Love them! Love to listen and share other teachers experiences and learn what might be useful in my class room.	Yes. 1) Note taking is an "activity" 2) Making groups mandatory is a good idea so students develop cooperative learning and answers and ask questions more easily.	4
5	Exceeded them - group activities: introductions and the sample course were very illuminating and telling/hearing about the experiences of others during prof. King's presentation. He's a great seminar leader.	I was surprised that it was so interesting and that I was so inspired. Almost all the presentations were illuminating	All the way through - very clear	 A. Thank you! A very useful outline for preparing my own portfolio. B. Not sure what this was - must have missed it. C. He didn't follow it - which is good! Text-based powerpoints aren't very compelling and he didn't (Prof. King) need it anyway. 	Very	Yes - some new writing assignments, group activities.	5
